THIRD YEAR.

MAYSVILLE, KY., SATURDAY, JUNE 16, 1894.

ONE CENT.

MAYSVILLE WEATHER.

What We May Expect For the Next Twenty-four Hours.

THE LEDGER'S WEATHER SIGNALS.

White streamer—FAIR.
Blue—RAIN OF SNOW.
With Black ABOVE—TWILIGHT WARMER.
If Black's BENEATH—COLDER will be.
Unless Black's shown—no change we'll see.

The above forecasts are made for a period of thirty-six hours, ending at 8 o'clock to-morrow evening.

THE BALD-HEADED MAN'S SORE SPOT.

I know the heated term is near,
Though I'm not weatherwise,
For on my head I feel and hear
The frisky festive flies.
I would that I a crown might wear
In the peaceful great beyond,
So flies could not rub off my hair
To make a skating pond.

Kentucky records the first fatal sun stroke of the season. Milt Hampton of Winchester, very dark, died from the result of becoming overheated in the sun. Kentucky is ahead in everything, the Louisville Baseball Club for instance.

Several days ago some fellow let two or three alligators loose in the river at Louisville, and all the little boys walked many miles out in the country to go in swimming. But their journeys are at an end, as the 'gators have all been caught. The boys up this way ran a great risk by going in swimming while the river contained such deadly reptiles, and we don't know but what there are several in the river yet.

Are you insured? If not, now is the time to provide yourself and family with a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy as an insurance against any serious results from an attack of bowel complaint during the summer months. It is almost certain to be needed and should be procured at once. No other remedy can take its place or do its work. Twenty-five and fifty cent bottles for sale by Theo. Power, Druggist.

IT'S SO IF IT'S IN THE LEDGER.

SHOOTING IN LEWIS.

He Was "Stovall" By Name and "Stovall" By Nature.

In our adjoining county of Lewis lives a man, Stovall by name, who believes in fight to the backbone.

Tuesday he and Rich H. Purcell, a prominent farmer living some distance East of South Manchester, engaged in a hand-to-hand battle and he used the hatchet in no mean degree upon Purcell. Stovall is a tenant on the farm of Elwood Riggs, a brother-in-law of Purcell.

Wednesday Mrs. Riggs, chancing to pass Stovall, called him names, when he up with his fist, knocking Mrs. Riggs down, mauling her face in a terrible manner.

Mr. Riggs coming to her assistance was attacked by the brute, and shot at twice, the first load missing its aim, the second taking effect in the left thigh, breaking the femur.

Stovall immediately departed for parts unknown.

If you have friends visiting you, or if you are going away on a visit, please drop us a note to that effect.

GREGSON, THE INVENTOR.

A Remarkable Englishman's Work in This Country.

Incessant Labor Nearly Cost Him His Life—He Tried America's Greatest Remedy, and It Made Him Well—Sleeps Sound for the First Time in Several Years.

"Inventing is my business," said Geo. Gregson.

This remarkable Englishman has been in this country five years. He received the great gold medal from the Paris Academy of Inventors, and it was his work that was selected by the Examiner-in-Chief at the World's Fair as the best representative invention of its class.

Most people think of inventors as men gifted with golden brains that turn out the most marvelous devices without exertion.

As a fact, men of ideas are the hardest workers. They live by the very sweat of their brains; in the eager pursuit of an idea, like many professional and business men, they forget that their minds are not tireless and that to rack their brains all day and far into the night the nervous system must have unusually good and abundant nourishment that will build up its myriad delicate parts.

The following letter from Mr. Gregson is an example that is better than columns of advice:

CAMBRIDGE, MASS., April 5th, 1894.

"Wells, Richardson & Co.—Gentlemen: Having been subject for years to extreme nervousness, with its attendant want of sleep, I was induced, much against my will, to try a bottle of Paine's Celery Compound simply as an experiment. The improvement that followed was so marked that of my own accord I purchased a second bottle and then a third. By the time I had finished the third bottle I felt like a new man, slept sound at night and awoke in the morning both ready and able to do a day's work. Whenever I now feel in the least indisposed I at once take one or two doses, and that is all I require. In my case Paine's Celery Compound proved to be all that is said of it. You have my permission to publish this in any way you like. Very truly yours,

GEORGE GREGSON.

His is the experience of thousands of others.

Paine's Celery Compound feeds the nerve tissues, banishes lassitude, debility, inability to sleep, and prevents nervous prostration.

When an overworked and worried brain worker, no matter whether student, lawyer, minister, or man of business, has sufficiently sinned against the laws of health, he begins to suffer from disturbances of heart and stomach and to have certain signs of nervous exhaustion. He works with less ease, sleeps badly. New symptoms come: giddiness, liminess of sight, neuralgia of face or scalp, with entire nights of sleeplessness. Many a man struggles on, ignorant of the terrible demands he is taking on an exhausted brain.

Diseases of the nervous system do not come without warning. Rheumatism, dyspepsia, diseases of the heart, liver and kidneys are loud cries for a prompt increase of nourishment for the brain and nerve centers. This feeding with just the food these vital parts crave is what Paine's Celery Compound does. It is upon this marvelous power of nourishing all the nervous tissues and purifying the blood that its remarkable cures depend.

Its action is perfectly intelligible to every well educated physician, and that is just why Paine's Celery Compound is so unhesitatingly prescribed by physicians in every city, town or village, without exception, in the United States or Canada.

It supplies rich, new blood, full of brain and nerve food; it feeds worn-out nerve centers and exhausted tissues wherever the freshly enriched blood stream goes. The languor and tired feeling that without exception accompanies thin, lifeless blood, vanishes; the spirits are raised and a new feeling of health and life declares the presence of pure blood and well fed nerves and brain.

OH, WHAT A GAME!

Four Thousand Kinks Taken Out of Augusta's Crack Team.

Augusta's Baseball Club can't play ball, that's settled.

They can't even play shucks. Some nine or ten great big strapping fellows from Chilo, California, Higginsport, Levanna, Dover, Ripley, and several from Augusta came up yesterday to play the Regulars.

Some were 7 feet, some 6 feet and others 5 feet tall, but the Regulars weren't afraid to "run up" against them.

They went out to the park and began to bat—wind, and kept it up almost constantly throughout the entire game, the score for six innings standing 24 to 6 in favor of the Regulars.

They finally gave up in disgust and went home convinced that they couldn't play ball.

HAD TO JUMP.

Or Face No. 1 On the Trestle Over Limestone Creek Yesterday.

No. 1 is the Cincinnati Fast Line on the C. and O., due here at 6:10 in the morning.

And everyone who has ever seen her run knows that she is the fast line sure enough.

At least Charles Samuels, a young man who wouldn't buy a gold brick or blow out the gas, can tell you a little about the fast running.

Charley is used to walking ties, and yesterday, while in this city, he thought he would take a tie ticket for home.

Accordingly he went down to the railroad and boarded the ties at the foot of Market street, and then facing the rising sun he started for a point near Springdale, where he was to alight and take a skiff for home, as he lives on the opposite side of the river.

About the time he arrived at the long trestle over Limestone creek, the fast line "blowed" for the Chester crossing, and he never heard her.

On he went and on she came, and Charley heard her and tried to make a run for the other side of the trestle.

Finding it impossible to get that far without knocking the train from the track, and having sense enough to know it was a mail train and he mustn't stop it, he jumped from the highest point and alighted feet first in the slimy mud in the bed of the creek.

And he didn't do a thing but go in up to his armpits, while the engineer and fireman gave him the broad grin.

Several citizens who chanced to be coming along at that time saw him play the balloon without the parachute act and rushed to his assistance, and by main force managed to pull him from his hole.

He was uninjured, save a severe wrench of the nerves.

It is unnecessary to add that he didn't go back on the trestle to continue his journey.

The moral is for the citizens and pedestrians to keep off the trestle, as they don't know at what hour the train is due.

Charley, we must congratulate you on your good jump.

All of the Big Sandy passenger boats are being overhauled and put in shape for the summer season, while the Big Sandy freight business is being handled by push boats.

FOND OF WOMEN.

And That's What Caused the Downfall of J. T. Marshall.

James T. Marshall, a man of family and heretofore unquestioned honesty, living in the county, is charged with bunking two tobacco warehouses out of $1,000.

A short time ago Mr. Marshall, who is a tobacco buyer, informed the Farmers' and Shippers' Warehouse of Cincinnati that he knew where he could purchase a fine crop of tobacco in Mason county low down for cash, but he did not have the required amount to make the purchase.

The Farmers' and Shippers' Warehouse have had many dealings with Mr. Marshall, and they thought they could place implicit confidence in him, and advanced him $500 to enable him to make the purchase.

Mr. Marshall took the first train for Louisville, and told one of the warehouses there precisely the same story, and as he was known to the Louisville house as a man of integrity and honesty, he was advanced $500 by them.

Since then Mr. Marshall has not been seen or heard of by his family, who are nearly wild with grief and cannot account for his actions.

The tobacco men of Cincinnati, in discussing the sudden disappearance of Mr. Marshall, say that he is well known there, having been for years connected with the Morris Warehouse in that city as a drummer and part of the year as accountant.

It was stated that he left the Morris Warehouse on account of a discovery that he was too much given to the fondness for women.

It was also recounted that after his leaving the market there he went to Louisville, where he succeeded in winning the good graces of both dealers and inspectors.

That accomplished he made a buying trip up through the state, and soon afterward shipped a large number of hogheads into the Louisville market.

It was discovered, after the sale, it is said, that he had "nested" the tobacco, putting in large quantities of inferior goods in such a way that they escaped the inspector's sight.

On the day of sale he demanded cash, refusing checks in payment.

As is usual in such cases the inspectors were held liable for the failure of the tobacco to come up to samples, and they were out several hundred dollars by the deal.
